The chief financial officer of Taos Health Systems will lead the nonprofit until a CEO is recruited, officials said during a board meeting Oct. 22.

Steve Rozenboom was tapped to fill the post temporarily after the departure of interim CEO Phil Lowe in September.

A second interim CEO who arrived earlier this month left the post due to what board members were told was difficulty adjusting to the high altitude.

At least one candidate for CEO was expected to visit the nonprofit, which includes Holy Cross Hospital, this week.

Taos Health Systems and a management company, Quorum Health Resources, began recruiting a new CEO this summer. Peter Hofstetter, who led the nonprofit since 2009, departed the hospital in July. — Andrew Oxford
